The Bombay Gazette

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1868.

IT is remarkable that the voices of two such men as Sir John Lawrence and Sir Seymour Fitzgerald should have been raised at almost the same time in Bengal and Bombay in clear disapproval of our present system of Municipal Revenue. The words of our own Governor are those of a statesman who has weighed the theories of our ablest economists in the far higher arena of the House of Commons. But the utterance of the Viceroy, though to the same purport, cannot be considered to be a mere echo. Sir John Lawrence, a Civilian of Civilians, in the Resolution of the Government of India, not only expresses the opinion of a man who rose to his high position through the grades of Collector, Magistrate and Commissioner, but also the real honest sentiment of the great body of administrative officials who rule this country. We are glad to hear again the ring of the genuine metal and to find its fair value asserted for the theory which is slowly formed during years of constant and varied labour. Since the time of Lord Dalhousie, there has been a violent disposition on the part of the authorities to trust to partially learned deductions from books: to imitate rather than to originate: to allow a hint of the Home Government, or a squeak in Exeter Hall, to outweigh the opinions of the local officers and overthrow the traditions of a century. The Civil Service, which used to pride itself on conservative tendencies, has too easily adapted itself to performing the functions of a funnel, and so far sunk in the esteem of calm judging men. For the Viceroy, a man of an older school, and brought up nearer to the shadow of our great Indian traditions, has now in a unanswerable minute condemned the whole system of Municipal Taxation under a mediocre regime which had forgotten Metcalfe and Elphinstone. These great statesmen, and the men who had been associated with them in creating law in a disordered and worn out society, saw clearly that one great source of oppression and evil in the land was the number of tolls, town and village cesses and hereditary dues, which operated in restraint of trade. They found in such populous cities as Surat and Ahmedabad that some Dessaye or Patel claimed a right to levy money from everybody bringing goods into the city. In the smaller villages the Meerasdars and village officers were all in the habit of extorting in the same arbitrary manner: and it was a not uncommon sight to behold the Patel of a market-town going the rounds of the stalls, and extracting a handful from each, whatever might be the commodity sold. Many of these abuses were illegal: the remainder would have been legal if the sanctioned rate had been adhered to. But it seldom was adhered to: enormous sums over and above the sanctioned rate were usually collected, as remarked by Sir Bartle Frere in describing the old municipal condition of Poona. For these reasons, the generation of officers who settled the Deccan and Guzerat set their faces against the system; and an Act was ultimately passed in concise terms, sweeping away the whole set of town duties. But the whole set have been revived anew; and the measures of the present generation imply that the earlier officers were unwise and misinformed. We are glad now to hear the Viceroy, who must have had personal experience of both, affirming the wisdom of the earlier principle. The half learned political economy of the last twenty years has cost more than it was worth. The municipal improvements, cleaning of streets, appointing of scavengers, and such like, in Bengal are small compared with the nuisances the Town Dues have occasioned. How can trade possibly be free where every town along the River Ganges comes in the shape of a puttawala to extract tolls from merchants for goods in transit? The extra expense and interest thereon may be recovered ultimately from the consumer; but who has to pay for the loss of time? or the consequence of a quarrel with the puttawala? The bold Briton may overcome these annoyances: but not so the native trader. He believes that the puttawala is a part of the Sirkar, and will as such be supported by the karkoons and all the native myrmidons of the cutcherry. The ignorant trader cannot read the table of tolls: the puttawala may be right in the amount of exaction, and, if so, the resisting native will be punished by fine and imprisonment. So it is by far the better policy to pay whatever is demanded than to be lugged before the Tahsildar and perhaps kept waiting outside his cutcherry for the best part of the day before getting a hearing. It often happens that three or four municipal towns lie along a high-road within a day's journey of each other: the grievous vexation must then be equal to that which is suffered on the Ganges. It may be even greater where there are Government road tolls between the towns. In the present state of the natives, no system of bonded warehouses can be established without increasing the corruption we have detailed. The puttawala will exact larger fees before he will allow any goods to be warehoused, and it will be the interest of the owner to pay him. We may, and do, raise lots of money, and effect some improvements in towns; but this good is over-balanced by the oppression and fraud, and consequent injury to morality, and to loyalty, which this new system causes.

LIEUT.-COLONEL HAGGARD, the Agent for Gunpowder in this Presidency, and his Assistant, we understand, are shortly to proceed to Bengal to learn the process of making gunpowder as introduced at Dum-Dum.

MR. H. N. B. ERSKINE, recently appointed Acting Collector of Poona, assumed charge of the office on Monday last, relieving Mr. Bell, First Assistant Collector, who has been officiating since the departure to England of Mr. Oliphant, the late Collector.

MR. OVANS, Bombay Civil Service, who has been in England on furlough for the past two years, is expected to return to India by the Overland mail steamer about the 8th or 10th instant. Before leaving India this gentleman long held the appointment of First Assistant Collector, Poona, by the community of which station he is favourably known.

LIEUTENANT NICHOL, Bombay Invalid Establishment, having obtained an appointment in the Postal Department in charge of mails between Bombay and Suez, the Government of India have decided that he is not precluded from receiving staff or other pay in addition to his Indian invalid pay, as the duty on which he is employed, being between Egypt and India, is considered within Indian limits.

WE understand that the post of Educational Inspector, vacant by the absence of Mr. Curtis on sick certificate, has been filled by the promotion of Professor Bühler to the Acting Inspectorship, and that Mr. Ramchrishna G. Bhandarkar, Head Master of Rutnagherry High School, will succeed Mr. Bühler as Acting Professor of Sanscrit at the Elphinstone College. Mr. Bhandarkar obtained the degree of M. A. in Sanscrit, and has written two useful Anglo-Sanscrit Primers. He has also shown himself a zealous and able master, whose pupils have always held the first place in matriculation examination.

IN our article on the Mysore Raj on Saturday we were accidentally guilty of a mis-statement in the concluding paragraph, wherein we asserted that the child Cham Rajah, whom Hyder Ali so curiously selected to succeed the last of the Chickhi Deo dynasty, was he whose recent death, at so great an age, occasioned the great Mysore succession controversy. This was an error. That child died in early manhood, of small-pox; and it was his son, whom, on the death of Tippoo, we unearthed from a hovel, and elevated to the throne, and whose death should have been referred to. He was the second and last of his dynasty—and but very remotely, if at all, connected with the puppet dynasty which preceded his father's elevation. The present Rajah is merely his adopted son.

WE have to solicit the attention of the Commissioner of Police and also of the Health Officer to a delicate question—a grievance which they alone can remedy. The Bombay Race-course is one of the few places available to many gentlemen for morning or evening exercise, on foot or on horseback. Unfortunately there are several adjacent localities inhabited by natives who roam over the open Flats at discretion. Now, we need not more plainly inform either Mr. Souter or Dr. Lumsdaine what consequences ensue from the exercise of privileges which the wanderers accord to themselves; but the result, neither pleasing nor salubrious, constitutes a serious public grievance and bids fair to close the Race-course as a promenade. Will not the officers we have named step in and arrest the evil at once?

WE entirely sympathise with the correspondent who laments the existence of public vehicles which are a scandal to Bombay. What is a Bombay buggy good for? Who invented a strange machine which has no merit except that of lightness? No doubt a tolerable carriage on the buggy plan can be built, but there is probably not a single buggy plying for hire which is even tolerable. Some are notoriously shameful; the carriage is ricketty and dirty, the harness is old and supplemented with ropes and rags; the horse—we call the creatures horses by courtesy—is a living skeleton. The hood only imperfectly protects the passenger from the sun, and if the horse falls, or the horrible contrivance turns over, no address can save the victims from a severe, it may be fatal, fall. Even if no reform is made in carriages which are the despair and laughingstock of all who enter the town, surely some of the worst might be driven off the road. But invention must be at a discount here if some ingenious builder cannot devise a new and decent conveyance. Our attention has been called to the Neapolitan buggy—an useful looking carriage, but it has four wheels, and the experts think that fatal. Nevertheless, it is light, there is a seat for the driver in front, and a hood to shelter the passengers. Another alternative is the Australian car. Here the driver sits by himself and the passengers, covered by a sort of awning, face the rear. But what we want is a light, decent public carriage, suited to the climate; and if our local artists in coach-building had had any Yankee "go" in them they would have invented something fitting long ago.

WE learn that when H. M. S. "Dryad" was at the Island of Perim on the 7th November, a fight was going on between two of the Arab tribes at Babelmandeb. A report on the subject has been prepared for Government.

IT has been ruled that officers, who may be appointed to native regiments as probationers for the Staff Corps, subject to passing the examination, are entitled to the full regimental pay and allowances of their rank, without horse allowance, whether present with the corps to which they may be attached, or absent on duly authorized leave.

THE Major General Commanding Mhow Division of the Army recently recommended the construction of buildings as ironing-rooms for regimental dhobees, in view to the prevention of soldiers' clothes being carried to dhobees' houses as at present. The Government of India, it is said, considered the application an entirely novel demand, and negatived it.

MAJOR H. B. URMSTON, says "Indian Public Opinion," will revert to his substantive appointment as Deputy Commissioner of Rawul Pindee.

WE observe that Lieutenant Colonel J. E. Cracroft, on return from Cashmere, will officiate as additional Commissioner of Peshawur Division, until further orders.

WELLS and embankments in connection with irrigational works are to be constructed in the Punjab by borrowed capital in all suitable localities.—Englishman.

THE "Indian Daily News" says that all uncovenanted officers, holding appointments as Assistant Commissioners, will in future be designated Personal Assistant, to Commissioners.

MAJOR CRICHTON, Deputy Commissioner, Hoshungabad, and Capt. H. F. Newmarch, Deputy Commissioner, Bundara, have applied for furlough to Europe.—Central India Times.

THE 1st Regiment N. I., we see, arrived at Agra from Dum-Dum on the forenoon of the 26th instant. The regiment relieves the 41st N. I. at that station. The 41st has left for Sahibgunge en route to Bhootan.

A CALCUTTA paper states that the Port Canning case was to come on before Mr. Justice Norman on the 1st proximo. On the 25th ultimo Mr. Woodroffe, counsel for Mr. Schiller, made an application to the Court to postpone the trial of the case, which was opposed by the Advocate-General, and refused with costs.

THE Government has granted to Mr. R. C. Tullah, the Examiner of Claims, Fort William, a good service pension of Rs. 333 5 4 after a continuous service of thirty years, and has recommended him to the Secretary of State for a higher rate of pension in recognition of Mr. Tullah's meritorious service since the introduction of the new system of audit and account. —Indian Daily News.

IT is rumoured that the actress of the Simla troupe, who had been driven into the commission of an attempt at suicide by the persecution to which she was subjected, has had a purse of Rs. 10,000 presented to her by some of those who sympathized with her, and who deprecated the conduct of the manager in not having the least scruple in divulging the supposed faux pas in consequence of which he had dismissed her. —Indian Public Opinion.

WE ("Indian Public Opinion") hear that the 29th Regiment Punjab Native Infantry, at present stationed at Moradabad and Shahjehanpore, have been ordered to Peshawur;—the two former stations having been condemned as military stations. Rohilkhund used, not many years ago, to be called "the Garden of Upper India;" and it was considered to possess a most healthy climate. We are greatly surprised, therefore, to learn that any of its stations should be condemned for the cantonment of troops, and Peshawur preferred to them.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN BAGENAL, OF THE 16TH LANCERS.

THE Madras papers announce the death in Fort St. George early last Wednesday morning of Captain Walter P. Bagenal, of H. M.'s 16th Lancers. He entered the army as Cornet on 31st August 1858, was promoted to Lieutenant on 16th July 1859, and to Captain on 28th August 1863.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE left Bombay for Calcutta on Monday.

The Central India Times states that on the morning of the 2nd (to-day) the Chief Commissioner was to hold a grand durbar, with the two-fold object of affording Sir Richard an opportunity of seeing his old friends and of conferring khilluts on three native gentlemen—to two in recognition of their valuable services as honorary magistrates, till about the beginning of 1871. As to the section between Lahore and Peshawur the line has already been surveyed, and the workmen are waiting idle at the former city receiving pay, but doing no work, for want of a grant of money from Government.

On the 17th, at a little after 7 A.M., the Viceroy, Sir Richard Temple, Mr. Seton-Karr, and other officials, left Umballa by special train for Calcutta. This departure has, however, only given us a temporary lull in the storm of big-wigs which has been sweeping over this station, for this evening the Commander-in-Chief, with several members of his personal and the head-quarters staff, are expected to arrive. On the 23rd Col. Lumsden, the Quarter Master General of the Army, arrives, and on the same day there is to be a review of all the troops in garrison. On the 25th His Excellency departs in a special train for the southward, making but little stay anywhere till he arrives at Calcutta.

Owing to the famine there have been considerable changes in the relief, the telegraph officials being worked to death in transmitting counter orders. G/19 R. A. had already commenced its march from Jullundur to Mooltan when a telegram was despatched to say that the battery was to remain at Jullundur. As the battery had, however, proceeded some two marches towards their destination, the order arrived somewhat late. This change in the movements of G/19 will, I fancy, cause the battery at Mooltan, which was to have gone to Meean Meer, and the battery at the latter station, which was to have marched to Jullundur, also to stand fast for another year. A/F R.H.A. at Umballa has likewise been ordered to remain here another year, instead of proceeding to Meerut as had been intended. Indeed, I believe, that scarcely any movements of Artillery in this Presidency will take place this cold season. The 21st Hussars were to have marched from here for Lucknow to relieve the 5th Lancers at Lucknow, but two days before the day appointed for their departure the order arrived for them to pass another year at Umballa. Of course this has caused the return to Lucknow of the 5th Lancers, who had proceeded as far as Cawnpore at least, before they received their counter order. The 20th Hussars, which was to have relieved the 21st Hussars, will also remain for another season at their present station, Campbellpore. A party of recovered men of 93rd Highlanders under, Local Captain Hay, arrived here yesterday from Kussowlie, and continued their march towards Jhan-i to-day. Yesterday also Captain Munro, with 6/22 R. A. and some attached men of other batteries, arrived here and march in a day or two down country. Lieutenant Wilson, R.A., with about forty volunteers from the 91st Highlanders, arrived here the day before yesterday from Chinsurah and proceed northward to-morrow.

I do not know whether you have heard that the "Lahore Chronicle" will on the 1st proximo be absorbed into the "Indian Public Opinion," also published at Lahore—Dr. Leitner having bought the former paper, which has been in a declining state of health for some time.

M. R. Kennedy, R. E.; Captain P. T. Gruchy; Messrs. J. Scott and J. Tucker. Withdrawn—Mr. Thos. Proud, Mr. Lewis Shattock, and Captain Tolputt.

WE learn from a Hongkong paper that the steamers Indore and John Bright, formerly belonging to Parsee merchants, Bombay, which have lain long idle in Hongkong, hoisted the "Stars and Stripes" in the place of the English flag. Both steamers have been purchased by Messrs. A. Heard & Co., and have been renamed. The Indore is now the Mars, and the John Bright will henceforward be known as the Venus. It was quite uncertain between what ports the two steamers would run.

THE B. and B. S. S. Co.'s s. s. Krishna arrived in harbour from Suez yesterday. She brought the following passengers:—Miss Chamberlain, Rev. J. and Mrs. Higgins, Miss Murray, Miss Cook, Mr. Hastings, C. H. the Queen of Zanzibar and suite sailed in this steamer from Suez to Aden.

IN October last a Marwaree Brahmin, named Heerachund Kooshalchund, was arraigned before Mr. Arthur St. John Richardson, Session Judge of Ahmednuggur, for culpable homicide amounting to murder, in having on or about the 27th September last struck one Ramjee Jadow on the head and face with a wooden stick. It appears from what transpired before the Sessions Court, that the prisoner was a tall, bony, and active-looking person, and though in the habit of taking six grains of opium per diem, was not, in the opinion of the Civil Surgeon, a confirmed opium eater. The deceased was an elderly man, a pensioned apothecary, and was lame of one leg. The patell of a village where the offence was committed stated that he had seen the corpse of the deceased, the clothes perfectly wet with blood, and that he had seen the accused at the same time, his jacket and other clothes stained with fresh blood. The corpse lay on its face, and near it, on the right side, were a mallet and a stone, and on the left side a thick cane, the handle of which had blood and human hair on it, and the mallet and the stone were also stained with blood. The head was bare, and the hair of the deceased's tuft corresponded with that adhering on the stick. The skull has been fractured at the back of the head, both jaws and cheeks had been wounded, and four teeth lay on the ground near the head of the corpse. It was said by the deceased's grandson that a bank near which the deceased had been lying, and the pillow and the clothes on which he had slept, had blood on them. The Civil Surgeon could identify only the jacket, described in evidence as that which the accused wore when he was discovered seated astride on the dead man and pounding his head with a piece of the dried earth which had formed the fire-place. Close to the right hand of the accused were the handle of the mallet and the stone, with the former of which it seems—the members of an inquest held on the deceased's body were satisfied—the fatal wound on the back of the head was inflicted. The deceased found in this position under circumstances which clearly indicated a recent act of homicide, it rested entirely, the Session Judge was of opinion, with the accused to explain how Ramjee came by his death, unless, as all circumstances strongly suggested, from the hand of the only person who passed the night in the same room with the deceased, viz., the prisoner Heerachund. The man who first saw the accused sitting on the body of the deceased was a grandson of the latter; and he, without disturbing the accused, called Gungaram, who was passing on the road, "to see this sight." On Gungaram approaching, the grandson seized the arms of the accused, rolled him off the body of the deceased, and placed him with his back to the wall, where he remained until the police patell removed him to the guard-house. When arrested by the patell the accused, it is said, trembled and had blood-shot eyes; his right hand slightly bled from an abrasion on the thumb, and his legs, knees, hands, and arms were stained with blood. The accused was residing with the deceased for the benefit of medical treatment, and weary of his own existence he appeared to have suddenly taken the idea of revenging himself on his unsuccessful apothecary. The court, agreeing with one of the assessors, and differing from the other, convicted the accused and sentenced him to be hanged.

On appeal the High Court (the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Newton and the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Tucker) confirmed the sentence of death.

SERMON ON RITUAL.

THE Rev. Charles Gilder, incumbent of Trinity Church, Sonapore, preached on Sunday evening, on a subject which occupies an important place among the topics of the day. His text was Hebrews viiii, 5—"Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith He, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the Mount." The preacher adverted to the extent to which ceremonial entered into human affairs, the forms and solemnities observed on occasions of public importance, on investiture in office, in the administration of justice, and in all those cases in which it was sought, by some outward action, to give significance to the events and transactions of life. Hence might be inferred the use of ceremonial in divine worship. But this had been disputed, and a comparatively tame and unimpressive ritual had been claimed for Christianity. It had been maintained that God cared little for the outward form of religion. Were this true, religion would stand in painful contrast to God's other works, each of which had its appropriate form. But the allegation was contradicted by the practice of those who in theory maintained it. All had found it necessary to have some form of worship. A dissenting minister of no mean ability had lately written—"Ritualism, within certain limits, is reasonable and useful." The allegation was contradicted, also, by the divine care exercised in prescribing the ritual of the Jewish Church. It remained, therefore, to determine what form of public worship is the best. In replying to this enquiry, the preacher said that the ritual which God gave the Jews was the only divine model which we possessed. Christianity had changed the letter but not the spirit. There could indeed be no alteration of will in Him who had prescribed that imposing service; for He is "the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever." The remainder of the discourse was directed against the notion that either the practice, or the teaching, of the Apostles, encouraged the common belief that the earlier ritual was to be entirely repealed when the Gospel was fully proclaimed and received. St. Paul, the great teacher of the doctrine of free grace, condemned adherence to the Jewish law only where its observance was deemed necessary to salvation. The preacher concluded by explaining that ritual was to be regarded only as a matter of decent order and not as a principle of saving faith. Faith in the blessed Redeemer must give life to the form. Without this faith, the form becomes dead—like the human frame when the soul has departed. The preacher hoped on a subsequent day to treat of Ritual of the Apostolic Church.

FAIR AT SUNKERSETT HOUSE.

THE annual fair at Tardeo, in honour of the Hindu deity Bhowance Shunker, commenced on Saturday last, and as usual Mr. Venayekrao Juggonathjee Sunkersett received large numbers of visitors to his house and grounds. On Sunday night, the bungalow, the dhurmsallah, and all the grounds around were crowded by an immense number of natives. These seemed to enjoy the elbowing and squeezing in the heartiest style;—some viewing the curiosities in the house, others enjoying the breeze in the verandah, crowds walking about the grounds and through the fair, dozens pressing into temples where there was space for single individuals only, and a few, too, quietly having a nap in some secluded corners. At ten o'clock commenced a grand display of fireworks which highly pleased the spectators, and at times caused quite a sensational murmur of applause. Monday night, again, was what we might call the "European" night. Mr. Venayekrao had issued invitations to a large number of Europeans, and in his rooms were assembled His Excellency the Governor and suite, several members of the Legislative Council, numerous military officers, Government officials, and private gentlemen. There were, too, not a few ladies; music added to the variety; the brothers Ridgway went through some of their performances;—and the assembly was quite enjoyable. Towards ten o'clock His Excellency the Governor led the way to the dhurmsallah, which for the time was converted into a stand for the enjoyment of the scene provided on the occasion. The gardens, filled with flowers and graceful trees—the fountain flinging its crystal showers amid the glitter of gas jets or well-trimmed lamps,—and the surrounding walks, nicely illuminated, rendered picturesque by groups in Asiatic costumes or graced at times by lady guests—formed a pleasing sight as witnessed in the light of the moon. And then the fireworks began to flash and glare and crack; Mr. Venayekrao made himself ubiquitous, with bouquets and rose-water; everybody did his best to please the ladies; and in pleasing and being pleased, a nice evening was spent.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FULL DRESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I can understand what full dress means when the term is applied to a military gentleman, or to a gentleman holding some civil or political appointment under Government, by which he is compelled, or has the privilege, of wearing a uniform. A court dress may also, I presume, be called full dress; and we all know what full dress is for dinner or an evening party. But I should like you to let me and some others know what is supposed to be full dress for a private gentleman of this era, supposing him invited to attend a levée or durbar to be held in the afternoon.—Yours, &c.,

Bombay, 1st December. P. D.

OUR PUBLIC CONVEYANCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The accident that occurred some time ago, of a buggy upsetting, and thereby severely injuring one of the two gentlemen in it, cannot have failed to attract attention, and now that this occurrence has had, for result, the amputation of an arm, it is devoutly to be hoped that the proper authorities will bestir themselves to improve the "disgraceful state" of our public conveyances.

It is true this deplorable accident was not brought about by any visible defect in the buggy; still it cannot but be admitted that if the public could depend upon better conveyances than our shabby-looking buggies, such accidents would not occur so easily. A four-wheeled conveyance, for instance, would not have met with the same fate, in all probability. The fact is, we Bombayites are very far behind other seaports in India and China in these respects, but why we should be so I fail to see.

We have got omnibuses running in several directions and over a certain part of our city, and those that have occasion to ride in them will all agree that they are superior to our buggies; still a large portion of our European community does not, or rather could not, avail themselves of the same, because they are open to every one, and consequently more fit for the native inhabitants of our city.

This Omnibus Company pays handsome dividends, and there in no reason to suppose that a "Public Conveyance Company" should not meet with the same success. I believe that if such a company were started it would pay capitalists well. Light four-wheeled shigrams, drawn by one horse, should be let out for hire on the same terms as the buggies are now, and the license fee should also be the same. In Calcutta a company of this description has been doing well for several years, and it would certainly prove a great boon to the many large families in our midst.

If a little more public spirit could be infused into our community at large, I am certain it would not take very long ere we should have as respectable public conveyances as are to be seen in other parts of the globe.

Our present rattle-traps will be put to severer tests than before, on account of the larger passenger traffic that will pass through our city, and under such circumstances capitalists might consider it worth their while to take the subject in hand.—Yours, &c.,

PUBLIC CONVEYANCE.

THE INSOLVENCY OF PALLONJEE JEEWANJEE.

A SPECIAL sitting of the Insolvent Debtors' Court was held on Monday by the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Tucker, Commissioner, for the purpose of proceeding with the petition of Pallonjee Jeewanjee. The liabilities of this insolvent amounted to Rs. 1,12,052, and the assets (good) to Rs. 13,600. The petition was filed on 25th February 1868, and was heard by the Commissioner in July, being opposed by the widow of Luxamon Rajaram and by two Marwarees, on the ground of four acts punishable by section 50 of the criminal section of the Act, and also on the ground of petitioner making false entries in his schedule, and of misconduct generally in contracting debts without reasonable expectation of paying them, in speculating in shares, and in being more extravagant in personal expenditure than his means justified. The Commissioner, in giving his judgment, said that objections had been raised on the grounds of concealment of property, and it had been alleged that the insolvent had concealed his share in a contract for the building of the markets on the Esplanade. It appeared, however, from the evidence of Mr. Johnston, the contractor, that it was the insolvent's son that had the share and not the insolvent himself; there had been several other suspicious circumstances, but still he had not felt himself justified in holding the allegations as proven. The second charge was that of fraudulently making away with property in that he had created a fictitious mortgage on his dwelling house for Rs. 20,000, but of this, the Commissioner, acquitted him; and in the third that of a fraudulent preference he also gave him the benefit of a doubt. He also thought the charge of destruction of books unsustained, and so found all the charges of criminal misconduct. With regard, however, to the objection of general misconduct, he thought the insolvent's conduct towards the Marwaree creditors had not been honest; also found that the insolvent had recklessly squandered his funds in share speculations, and otherwise, and therefore, in order to mark his disapprobation of such conduct adjourned the discharge for one year and ordered the cancelling of the interim order for protection.

An appeal against this judgment was taken to the High Court, on the ground that the order of adjournment for one year was not warranted by the evidence, that the petitioner's conduct had not justified such a judgment, and that as the criminal charges had been founded unjust, the petitioner ought to have got his discharge. The appeal was heard by the Hon'bles Chief Justice and Sir Charles Sargent, and their Lordships were of opinion that the insolvent had not been guilty of misconduct in speculating in shares, as he had simply made an investment and was not to blame, though that had turned out unprofitable. They were, however, of opinion that his schedule was not satisfactory, and so ordered that he should have power to amend it within three weeks from the date of their judgment. The Court reversed the order made by the Commissioner, and ordered him to fix a day for proceeding with the case, within six weeks, and withdrew the interim order of protection till day of hearing.

The case accordingly came before the Commissioner on Monday for hearing under this decision of the High Court. The insolvent was examined on some points in his schedule that the High Court had thought it desirable to have further explanation of; and parties were then heard.

Mr. Mayhew addressed the Court on behalf of the Marwaree creditors, holding that the examination of the insolvent had not been at all satisfactory and that he was not entitled to his discharge.

The Advocate General then replied on behalf of the insolvent, remarking that—if his learned friend frequented a place of worship, he might be seen on his knees confessing that he had left undone those things which he ought to have done. That was the beautiful language, but yet his learned friend came here and on this very point pressed the claims against the insolvent. The opposition had, in fact, all along been of the most pertinacious character, relying almost mainly, if not entirely on a question about Rs. 76,000 which was never mooted before, and which first came on the tapis when the case was heard in appeal on 28th August last. The insolvent had been acquitted of all the criminal charges, though four had been selected and twenty-five witnesses called before his Lordship, and the Marwarees carried on the opposition—for the widow had not appeared in the appeal—because they said that insolvent, when he borrowed money from them, had stated it was for the purpose of the market contract which His Lordship and everybody must see was perfectly unfounded. The insolvent in his books—or rather no books—for he never was able to read or write. He could write his own name in a semi-legible manner and understood figures. He had had what he (the learned counsel) was sure none of those present would ever have got a bungalow presented to him by a Governor of this presidency—(Mr. Mayhew was here interrupting, but) the Advocate General begged that his learned friend would not interrupt him but would keep his misereable Marwaree in the background (a laugh). He would not abstain from using such arguments as he thought proper, if His Lordship did not hold that he was wrong. So he had to bring to the notice of the Court that, even with the disadvantage of being unable to read or write, insolvent had so succeeded in life that a former Governor of Bombay had such a confidence in his integrity as to present him with a bungalow. How, of course if the insolvent had kept books there would have been no grounds for the opposition. But he had not kept books and so he was now opposed and had from memory to give explanations of his business for the last fifteen years—a thing to which no man could reasonably be expected to do. Then, when the insolvent did make explanations, these were disputed, but no evidence had been brought against them. For instance, with regard to the accounts with Cowasjee Jehangeer, Cowasjee might have been called, but he drove in his carriage in Bombay and so his metha only had been sent. The opposing creditors had simply asked the Court to disbelieve the insolvent's statements without even any witnesses to prove them wrong, and it was an insult to the Court now to act in that manner when the insolvent's explanations were known and witnesses might have been called to contradict them. The hon'ble gentleman concluded by submitting that this was an unfortunate case to which the Court should now put an end, and so allow the insolvent to return to the support of his wife and family.

The Commissioner then gave judgment. When this insolvent was last before the Court, said His Lordship, he had considered that the circumstances were such as to justify him in ordering the postponement of the discharge for a year. An appeal against that judgment was taken to the High Court which was of opinion that his order should be reversed as sufficient grounds had not been shown to justify it. The High Court, however, had not been satisfied with the insolvent's schedule and so remanded the matter back to the Commissioner in order that the insolvent might be allowed to file an amended schedule explaining certain items which were not satisfactory to the Court above. In the order which had been sent to this Court no particulars were specified as to the points on which the High Court wished information. He might say that he had communicated with one of the learned Judges, Sir Charles Sargent, who had corroborated the statement by counsel today as to the desire for more information with regard to one of the sums borrowed by insolvent. It would appear that the insolvent had now filed a new schedule in which he professed to account for that sum. It differed in some respects from the amended balance-sheet inasmuch as it pointed out the sums borrowed from 1853 to 1861, and also gave certain new entries of sums alleged to have been received and paid, for white-washing, repairs, assessment and ground rents, which did not appear in the former statement. Altogether he had made out a statement which corrected the balance, but when he came to be examined with regard to that statement it was found that large sums were really only put down from recollection, and though insolvent professed to know the time at which the interest was due he was unable to give any dates, and as far as it was apparent to him (the Commissioner) that this statement had been concocted out of petitioner's own inward consciousness. He was bound to say that on looking to this statement he could not consider it satisfactory; and he considered that the insolvent was unable to give any satisfactory justification of his conduct. The insolvent was certainly bound to explain large engagements. He was a contractor, a builder of houses, an investor in lands, and large sums were constantly passing through his hands. Under these circumstances it appeared incredible to the Commissioner that the man had not kept books; and if he did not do so he was very much to blame. He had already stated in this Court that he would insist on books being kept by people who embarked in contracts like those in which this insolvent had been engaged; and he must consider it an act of misconduct when such persons came before him without books. If his opinion were asked he would say he believed the prisoner had kept accounts, but, irrespective of that opinion, the non-production of books justified the Court in withholding the discharge. He thought it extremely desirable that the Court should mark in every instance its sense of the impropriety of persons of this class not keeping accounts. He was of opinion that the insolvent had not given the dates or other particulars which with a little trouble he might have given, but still he did not think anything would likely be elicited by getting these dates, and so did not think it any use to ask for these. He therefore simply adjourned the hearing for three months from that day at the expiry of which period insolvent would get his discharge. The interim order for protection was withdrawn, and the costs of the creditors were ordered to be paid out of the estate.

This case lasted during the whole day.

AHMEDNUGGUR.—The rubbee crop was suffering from drought and in some places it had not been sown from want of rain. The price of grain was rising, and there were already complaints of scarcity of drinking water. The Mamlutdar reported that in the eastern part of the Rahoona talooka the villagers were leaving their villages. The state of public health was good.

DHARWAR.—There was rain in every talooka durin the fortnight under report. All the crops were in good condition. The state of public health was reported to be good.

ST. ANDREW'S DINNER.

THE annual dinner in celebration of St. Andrew's Day was held on Monday evening in Framjee Hall, Breach Candy. The efforts of the committee, and the great energy exerted by the honorary secretary, Mr. H. G. Dunlop, had produced excellent arrangements, and a company of about one hundred gentlemen sat down to dinner. The stewards were the Hon. A. Brown, the Hon. A. H. Campbell, Captain Ronald Campbell, and Messrs. Mackintosh Balfour, Andrew Hay, and E. Tyrrell Leith. An instrumental band was supplied by Herr Schmuck. This was probably the first public appearance of Herr Schmuck's musicians; their performances on Monday night were of a very excellent and finished character, and added much to the evening's enjoyment, their operatic and other pieces being frequently applauded. The following is the programme of music played during dinner:—

1. OVERTURE ..... "Le Nozze di Figaro"... Mozart.
2. SELECTION (Op.) "Ernani" .... Verdi.

8. QUADRILLE..... "La Grande Duchesse" Offenbach.
9. DUETT ..... (Op.) "Norma" ..... Bellini.
10. GALOP ..... "Race" ..... Schmuck.

From the following bill of fare it will be seen that "haggis" was provided; and though the "chieftain o' the puddin' race" did not show its "sonsie face," having been prepared, not in the orthodox bag but in some other manner which in Scotland would be considered rather an innovation, yet the efforts of the cook were successful beyond expectation, for a really good haggis was produced.

The following is as correct a list of those present as we have been able to obtain:—Sir R. Couch, Sir C. Sargent, Hon'ble A. Brown, Hon'ble A. H. Campbell, Colonel Torrens, Rev. D. Macpherson, Captain Hume, Messrs. F. H. Souter, G. Hooper, G. F. Rimington, Donald Graham, H. Astley, T. E. Taylor, R. Valentine Reid, Dr. Steadman, Mr. James Windram, Captain Birdwood, Messrs. G. G. Young, J. MacDonald, Captain Searle, Messrs. M. Balfour, C. E. Chapman, Andrew Hay, H. Forman, Lieut. Leslie, Captain Ronald Campbell, Dr. Mackenzie, Messrs. John Macfarlane, E. Fletcher, W. M. Tennant junr., E. W. S. Login, James Dodds, J. Percy Leith, W. Thorburn, W. M. Macaulay, C. A. W. Cameron, J. W. Brown, L. T. Hall, D. Macfadyen, J. A. Rose, W. Gordon, E. M. Fogo, T. C. Glover, W. McIntyre, R. Brown, Auckland Campbell, H. G. Dunlop, A. C. Gumpert, W. H. Osler, Lieut. Marryat, R. E., Messrs. T. Ormiston, R. H. Baker, Russell Aitkin, Capt. Morland, Messrs. J. Faichney, T. Miller, J. Gordon, W. Fraser, J. Stuart, J. Marshall, A. J. McCallroy, R. N., E. Tyrrell Leith, A. F. Shepherd, W. Wedderburn, A. Lyon, A. F. Hewett, H. Lathbury, C. Currey, F. Hosgen, D. Colune, Captain Tulloch, Messrs. W. Paris, A. Hay, T. R. Macklin, James Ranken, C. Douglas, Captain R. Campbell, Major Macdonald, Mr. J. Fry, Captain Grant, Mr. Atkinson.

About a quarter to eight o'clock the company proceeded to the dining hall. The chair was occupied by Hamilton Maxwell, Esq., supported on the right by the Hon'ble Sir Richard Couch and the Hon'ble A. H. Campbell, and on the left by the Hon'ble Sir Charles Sargent and Colonel Torrens of the 45th (Welch Fusiliers) Regiment. Mr. Wedderburn, Esq., Secretary to Government, officiated as croupier. A blessing having been asked by the Rev. D. Macpherson, full justice was then done to the excellent dinner, after which

The Chairman proposed "The Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family."

The toast was drunk with great enthusiasm and the band played the "National Anthem" and "God bless the Prince of Wales."

The Chairman said the next toast which he had to propose was "The Governor, and the land we live in." (Applause.) He was not aware on what occasion these toasts were amalgamated, but it seemed to him that it was a very appropriate amalgamation. There was a very strong sympathy in this country between the Governor and the governed, and long might it continue, for it had a great deal to do with the welfare of the country. As railways progressed in the country and the railway system was extended, good roads made, and reservoirs constructed for irrigation and to provide a sufficient water supply, so trade and commerce would progress in the country. (Hear, hear.) But that progress could be greatly aided or retarded by the Governor of the Presidency, must be patent to all of them, and he must say that Bombay was particularly fortunate in having had Governors who had never retarded progress, but who had always been in advance of their time. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) People might not believe it, but such nevertheless was the case, and since he (the Chairman) had come to Bombay, there had been four Governors, and they had all done their duty. There was Lord Elphinstone—(hear, hear)—Sir George Clarke, and Sir Bartle Frere, and they all had done their duty, and by their energetic action they had done a great deal towards stopping the Indian mutiny. Then they had Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, who fortunately had not had to rule over them during such troublous times; but throughout the Abyssinian expedition he showed that foresight and good judgment that proved that he was the right man in the right place. The Presidency they could well imagine had advanced very much in civilization during the last ten years, but it was nothing to what it would be in the future, with the help of a good government. (Hear, hear.) The country was sure to progress; it must and it would progress with extended railway communication, water supply, and good roads; and then with the bounteous rain which nature had provided carefully stored up no famine would occur again. (Hear, hear.) Let them have a good Government, one that would provide for all emergencies, and the country would progress in a manner unprecedented in the present age.

The toast was drunk with cheers.

Band—"St. Patrick's day in the morning."

The Chairman then proposed the "Army and Navy." (Applause.) At all festive meetings among Englishmen, he said, it was one of the most enthusiastic toasts, for they were all proud of their army and their navy, and well might they be so. (Hear, hear.) Whether they looked back upon the pages of history, or whether they looked to modern times, they found the British army victorious in all parts of the world. (Applause.) The English flag waived over every sea, and to the British navy the day of action was always the day of victory. (Hear, hear.) Let those who said that the army of England was going down to the officers becoming effeminate look to the recent campaigns, when they endured all the hardships of the common soldiers, and then would any man tell him that the army was going down?—it was all gammon. (Laughter.) Whenever there was any work for the British army, the army would be ready to do it. Then, with respect to the navy, whether it was in iron clads, rams, or wooden ships the British sailors would fight as well as they had always done. There were the same strong hearts and the same brawny arms to work the guns, and after every victory the ringing British cheer that proclaims that England again has won the day would be heard. In their own time they had had the Abyssinian expedition, which was one of the finest samples of what England could do. Her armies were sent to a foreign shore, and after overcoming unparalleled difficulties, by able generalship they were brought back again, and a tyrant was shown that he could not imprison Englishmen with impunity. That was what the British army could do. The navy, too, had always done its work, and with respect to their volunteers—he did not know if he might speak of the volunteers,—they too would fight if called upon. He begged to propose the "Army and Navy."

Band—"The British Grenadiers" and "Rule Britania."

Colonel Torrens, 23rd Regiment (Welch Fusiliers), who was received with applause, replied for the army. He said—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I rise quite bewildered and very much surprised to return thanks to a galaxy of Scotch talent and intelligence and science such as perhaps Bombay never saw before—(laughter)—I rise to return thanks for the enthusiastic and loyal manner in which you have drunk to the health and welfare of the army of our Queen. God bless her! (Applause.) It is an honour, gentlemen. I look upon it as a great honour to be in this position, but at the same time it is a most unexpected honour. I had hoped that the Provincial Commander-in-Chief, Major General Gordon, would have been here, and he being a most accomplished gentleman and also a Scotchman, not to say a Highlander—(applause)—would have done much more justice to this return of thanks than I can. He being a Scotchman could have entered into your feelings more than I, and his experience of life would have enabled him to illustrate his speech by anecdote and all the charms that his varied experience could have added. However, he is not here, and so you must bear with a poor Irishman's blunders. (Laughter.) A thought passed through my head when I heard you with all the vigour of arm, with the handles of your knives—with your vigour of arm and strength of lung—you are rather to be congratulated, gentlemen, on your strength of lung—(laughter)—I was the very last thing; if that was their idea they would be putting themselves on a level with the most retrograde nation of the world. What did the Chinese say for instance? A Chinaman called everybody who was not a Chinaman a foreign devil, that was to say he regarded every one else but himself as a barbarian. In proposing that they should drink to Scotland, the Land o' Cakes, he would refer to the history and traditions of Scotland, which would show that Scotchmen were always ready and willing to come to the front when freedom and justice were in question. When they professed a love of their country it was not an unenlightened devolpement of selfishness because they wished to recognise that distinctive character, but that they would strive as far as their humble efforts went to add to her credit and good name. In this country they might do something—the love of their country would not be in vain if they proved themselves to be good sons of Scotland, and were ready to do battle for all that was noble, free, and just. (Applause.)

Mr. Leith in proposing "The Lassies," said that a task had been entrusted to him which, however grateful it must be, he felt utterly beyond his powers. He alluded to the health of "The Lassies;" and under that denomination he conceived himself justified in classing all the fair ones over the face of the habitable globe. (Hear, hear.) To do justice to the myriad virtues which adorned those whom man with strange presumption had designated "the weaker sex"—(oh, oh, and laughter)—would require an eloquence to which he could lay no claim. Any praise on his part would be simply superfluous. I appeal to gentlemen present whether it would not be

"To gild refined gold, to paint the lily
To throw a perfume on the violet,"

were he to expatiate on their abundant merits. (Laughter.) His purpose was to suggest rather than exhaust the theme which he brought to their notice this evening. He would remind them, however, of the innumerable blessings vouchsafed to men by those whom he might, without undue exaggeration, term wingless angels sent down to reform and comfort sinful man; for it was in this light that the fearless championess of woman's rights, Miss Becker, regarded her sisters here on earth. (Applause, and laughter.) The true position of woman as the apex of the material universe, the crowning work of creation had been thus admirably described by Scotland's favourite bard—

"And nature swears, the lovely dears,
Her noblest work she classes oh!
Her prentice han' she tried on man,
And then she made the lassies oh!"

(Applause.) Though his toast embraced the whole of the female sex, yet he was conscious that it would be highly unbecoming in him were he to fail in especially bringing before their notice on the occasion the lassies of Scotland. (Applause.) If they turned to the realms of Scottish History and Song they found that woman has there left her indelible impress. Who of them did not at once recall to mind figures standing out in bold relief like the beautiful and ill-fated Mary Stuart, sweet Hora Macdonald, Scott's Lady of the Lake, and Burns' Highland Mary. But to gentlemen to whom the lassies of Scotland were living realities he need say no more. (Laughter.) He therefore simply entreated them to drink in brimming bumpers with the utmost enthusiasm the health of "The Lassies." (Loud applause.)

Band—"Green grow the Rashes, O!"

Captain Hume, in replying to the toast, assured them that the ladies were well aware that they were everything to the gentlemen and that the gentlemen were everything to the ladies. The ladies sometimes led gentlemen into mischief, still no doubt they more frequently kept them out of it. (Hear, hear.) In thanking his learned friend for the able manner in which he had proposed the toast, he would say that he would be happy if gentlemen were always as successful in love as in their professional career, and as killing in peace as they were in war. (Applause.)

Mr. Walter Paris here sang "Old Simon the Cellarer."

Mr. Dunlop said he was very glad to propose "The Judges and the Bar." (Applause.) He was sorry to say that for the last two years people in Bombay had had rather more of law than they cared for, but it was one of those unhappy events that they could not get over. But he must say that a great deal of satisfaction was got both at the Bench and the Bar in Bombay. Nowhere could people boast of a greater amount of talent on the Bench and at the Bar than in Bombay. He believed, though he had been for many years in Calcutta, that Bombay was the finest place in the world. (Laughter.) Bombay people, he believed, thought so, and he thought they were quite right; though they might differ with the honourable Judges of the High Court in some respects he was always ready to bow to their decisions. (Laughter.) Lawyers, as a rule, were always the men who upheld the people in their strivings after liberty, and there was no nation on the face of the earth that had so striven after liberty as the Scotch. Wallace had died for liberty. Bruce fought and fought and fought again, he strove and he won. In these days Scotchmen did not need to fight for liberty; the tongue was far more able than the spear, and the pen gained more victories than the sword. Wherever the battle of liberty was to be fought, there was no people who could fight it like the Barristers, who always took either one side or the other. (Laughter.) He did not think they could get more excellent Judges or more excellent lawyers than in Bombay, and they had present with them this evening two Judges of the High Court of Bombay. (Applause). He did not think two gentlemen could be held in higher esteem than the two gentlemen he referred to,—Sir Richard Couch and Sir Charles Sargent. (Applause). He begged to propose "The Bench and TREACHER & COMPANY (Limited) are exclusive wholesale and retail Agents, in this Presidency, for the superior writing and copying fluids, manufactured by Messrs. BLACKWOOD & Co., of London.

THESE INKS ONLY are used in the Admiralty, Colonial, and Home Departments, Foreign, Treasury, War, and all other Government Offices, and by all the leading Public Companies in London and throughout Great Britain; and are very largely exported to the Colonies.

To Travellers and residents in the Mofussil, Messrs. Blackwood and Co.'s celebrated BLACK and RED INK POWDERS are invaluable; combining portability with all the excellencies characteristic of Messrs. Blackwood and Co.'s Inks.

By special arrangement, this Company are enabled to contract with Public Companies and other large consumers, for the supply of Messrs.
